In the Company of Women: Voices from the Women's Movement Bonnie Watkins, Nina Rothchild
An oral history of the contemporary women's movement, these compelling personal stories describe the movement that has transformed American life from the 1960s to the present. In addition to reflections by political activists are accounts by homemakers, businesswomen, artists, factory workers, scientists, policewomen, an ex-prostitute, an Arctic explorer, and many others. Encountering this company of women will change the way readers understand the women's movement. "The best history of feminism so far."- Carolyn Heilbrun
