Walking Through the Valley of Death; Experiences of a Hospice Social Worker Brittany Thurston

We shy away from death, and yet it is the one great equalizer of us all. Every living thing will someday find its time to leave, sometimes with peace and sometimes not. The dying always have something to share with the living, the ones left and the ones yet to come. What does death look like? What do those left behind find in themselves to help them cope? This book gives more than a glimpse into death and those left behind. It allows us the opportunity to have our own birth with death by being on the fringes of where death is every day-hospice.
