During a particularly brutal heat wave in Brooklyn, teenaged Gil is set adrift. With hours alone and nothing to do, Gil wanders between his fire escape and the apartment building's front stoop, busying himself with reading. But when an alluring stranger enters his life, Gil's summer takes a decidedly different turn. After an ambiguously educational seduction, Gil's isolation, intelligence, and a budding awareness of transgressed boundaries lead him toward new insight into the value—and the easy loss—of innocence.
