Charles Polk and his family are considering becoming Mennonite. But after living in the world all their lives, could they really live like the simple folk? Ruthie Kauffman can't help the funny things she feels when she's around Charles, but with all the trouble his presence is causing in the church, surely they can't be more than friends. When disaster strikes and rumors explode into full-blown accusation, Ruthie and Charles must decide who to trust—man or God. But only God can fix this mess!
