Rivers and Lakes (Amazing Biomes) Leon Gray

With science, the world around us, and STEM principles all informing the value of this series, it brightly describes biomes with detailed photography with a strong concentration on the features that make them unique. Wow sidebars center are compare and contrast driven and Bio-Facts describe the interactions between humankind and the biomes. Statistics are up-to-date and both fascinating and frightening from the fact that 20 tracks of land the size of football fields are destroyed in the Brazilian rainforest every day; this contrasted with the fact that 50% of all known species are found in rainforests. Quizzes are part of the endmatter.
